

LINDBERGH JAUNT EXTENDED TO ONE 'ROUND-THE-WORLD

Surprise Friends With Announcement They May Return Across Atlantic

BY WAY OF THE AZORES

Colonel Says Two Dreams of Boyhood Have Been Fulfilled

NOME, Alaska, Aug. 14.—A projected round-the-world flight blossomed today from the vacation air tour of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. The trip was originally destined to end in the Orient.

Their intention to extend their 7,000-mile trip by thousands of miles across Asia, Europe and the Atlantic was disclosed here last night by Colonel Lindbergh to a few friends as the flying couple awaited favorable weather for their dash across the Bering Sea.

Friends of the Lindberghs said the announcement was a complete surprise, and that even if such an extended journey had been talked over when they were planning their route to the Orient, the fliers had not revealed it. From the outset of their "vacation", begun on July 27, at New York, and during the several weeks of previous preparations, the only announced destination had been the Orient.

Meanwhile the clearing of the weather here, which started late yesterday, was awaited before a take-off for Karagin Island, 1,067 miles away on Kamchatka peninsula. Rain still was falling last night but the low barometric area causing the storm was moving eastward.

To the west several hundred miles, and around Karagin Island, messages last night said the weather was fair.

Much of the day yesterday Lindbergh spent at Safety Bay, twenty-one miles to the east, working on his low-winged monoplane. After checking his engine, he superintended the filling of the fuel tanks to capacity, more than 500 gallons.

On returning here, he said if the weather was at all favorable they would start today.

The famous flier did not talk over in detail the proposed round-the-world route beyond Tokyo. He said that following visits to Japanese and Chinese cities, they will fly by stages to Europe, but did not disclose whether their course would take them over Siberia or southern Asia.

The crossing of the Atlantic will be by way of the Azores.

In a joking mood after announcing their probable take-off today, already delayed twenty-four hours, Colonel Lindbergh said his two great boyhood ambitions had been fulfilled. First he said, he wanted to learn to fly, and second, he wanted to fly to Alaska.

The course westward from here, airmen pointed out, will be the first time a flight has been made across the Bering Sea by way of St. Lawrence Island, approximately half way to the Siberian coast. The jump from St. Lawrence Island to Cape Navarin, about 250 miles, will be their longest over-water flight of the trip to Karagin Island.

Karagin is a small island of volcanic origin, peopled only by a few Russians and Japanese fishermen. Lindbergh has a cache of gasoline there. Beyond there, the stops will be at Petropavlovsk, Memuro and Tokyo.

THREE INJURED

Three persons were treated at the Byberry Emergency Hospital, Byberry, yesterday for cuts and bruises about the face and body, resulting when a tire on an automobile in which they were riding blew out, near Penn Valley Park, sending the machine into a tree. The victims are: Thomas Kuchmachia, of 2828 Almond street, Philadelphia, driver of the machine; Walter Furtak, of 2619 Allegheny Avenue, Philadelphia, and his daughter, Laura 18, of the same address.

GRAND VIEW HOSPITAL FILLED TO CAPACITY

July Sets Record As Biggest Month in Institution's History

CLINIC IS NOW CLOSED

Grand View Hospital, Sellersville, housed more patients at one time during the month of July than at any other time since it was opened, according to a report of the superintendent made at the last meeting of the hospital directors. Fifty-four patients were in the institution at that time. The greatest number of admissions ever recorded during one day at the hospital occurred during last month; the report also brought out. This number was nineteen. Practically the entire hospital is housing its capacity in patients. There are seven babies in the nursery, which is reported to be the capacity of that department. BRISTOL CLUB MEMBERS VISIT AT CAMP BUCCOO

Commissioners Serving Each Week; George Meldrum, Langhorne, Mayor

PLAN ANNUAL SHOW

Commissioners to conduct the Buccoo camp municipality this week were elected Monday before dinner. George Meldrum, of Langhorne, No. 1, is the mayor for the third week; clerk Arthur M. Eastburn of Doylestown No. 1; commissioner of safety, Earl Wray, of Doylestown, No. 2; commissioner of health, George Reichard, of Warrington; commissioner of highways, Benjamin Kline of Sellersville; commissioner of buildings, James Marvin, of Yardley, and commissioner at large Lloyd Stapler, of Newtown, No. 2.

Buccoo was last evening to the Bristol Rotary Club, and Newtown American Legion, and this evening will entertain the Bristol Exchange Club.

The camp staff and campers are working on the acts to be presented at the fifth annual camp show on Thursday evening, August 20th, at 8. Each year the show draws hundreds of neighbors around Buccoo, and friends from the county. Last year was a banner year with over 500 present.

The senior staff at camp has continued its volleyball tournament victories, but it was with difficulty that they defeated the Indian Village led by Chief Carl Leidy. The volleyball tournaments have become very popular at camp, and each week their is a spirited contest to become the Buccoo Champions. The Indian Village in addition to its volleyball victory over the other scout groups also repeated its previous victories over the various camp.

Scouts are in camp this week from Bristol No. 2, and No. 5; Chalfont, Churchville, Doylestown No. 1, and No. 2; Langhorne, No. 1, Morrisville No. 1, Newtown No. 2, Perkasie No. 1, Sellersville, South Langhorne, Trevose and Yardley. Perkasie No. 1 under the leadership of Scoutmaster Clayton Pritchard, and assistant scoutmaster Ralph Freed have the most present with 16 scouts. The Cub camp, has boys from Bristol, Doylestown, Newtown and Perkasie.

Wm. Forepaugh, Scoutmaster of Trevose, who had been serving in the commissary department received a notice recalling him to his former work, and he was replaced by Eagle Scout Earl Myers, also of Trevose. Owing to the increased registrants in the Cub camp, it was necessary to add a new staff member, Frederick H. Clymer Jr., of Doylestown, son of the former council treasurer has become second associate Cub director, assisting assistant scout executive, Wm. F. Hauser, director of the Cub camp, "Freddie," as he is known to the Buccoo campers has been three years in the Cub camp and two years in the scout camp which has made him one of the five year veterans of Buccoo.

SWIMMING CONTESTS ARE FEATURE AT K. OF C. FETE

Fifty-Yard Races and 100-Yard Event Are Staged Before Enthused Crowd

DIVING EVENTS TONIGHT

The opening of the Knights of Columbus lawn fete and water carnival last evening proved to be a decided success and a large crowd assembled to witness the water sports which were the main attraction of the evening.

The first event was the 50-yard dash which was run off in heats. In the first heat Fulvio, Tacony, finished first with Sacks, Seneca, second.

In the second heat of this race, John Barrett, Bristol K. of C., crossed the line first and Valentine Manning, Eddington, C. C. C. second.

These four men qualified for the final which was won by Barrett with Sacks finishing second.

The second event was the 100-yard dash. There were ten entries all swimming in on heat which was won by John Barrett, who finished at least five yards ahead of his nearest competitor, who was "Rip" Armstrong of Bristol.

The feature of the affair tonight will be an exhibition diving contest given by Bernie Kelly, New Jersey State Champion, and "Bill" Gaskill, who finished second in New Jersey State Championship contests. Ernie Uhl, noted swimmer from Philadelphia will be present. A diving contest will be staged and this will be open to all amateurs in addition to those participating in the exhibition events. Amateurs are urged to enter this contest.

The swimming events will come to a climax Saturday with a swimming race from Burlington to Bristol. Among the entries is a prominent girl swimmer from Burlington who is expected to give the male swimmers a real contest. Among the Bristol entrants are "Bess" McGinley and Louise Lawrence of Bristol's fair sex.

Tonight the Daughters of Columbus will conduct a card party in connection with the fete.

TROPICAL TRADE

America's dependence on tropical products continues to be ignored by many who persist in the ideas of commercial geography taught in the schools of a generation ago. Then the United States imported manufactured products and exported raw materials. Today our imports are primarily raw materials, of which about 25 per cent comes from the tropics.

What is true of the United States is true to a lesser degree of other nations. The entire world is becoming more and more dependent on the tropics for essential supplies of raw materials. Fortunately, the productive capacity of the tropics has hardly been tapped. About 40 per cent of the earth's surface lies within the tropics and of this less than 4 per cent is under cultivation.

America's principal interests are in the countries and islands that lie to the South of this continent and in the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Malaysia. From them the bulk of our imports come.

The economic importance of this trade is obvious. It is sure to grow, bringing with it increased opportunities for export. Most of the trade of the countries of Central America, together with that of Cuba, Haiti and San Domingo, is with the United States. There is no better way of assuring these producing nations prosperity and of insuring a constantly increasing supply of tropical crops for those who live in the temperate zones than by fostering the development of strong and capable governments in the tropics.

VILLAINS WANTED

The powers of the movie world are not a little worried because of the present dearth of villains. No country cares to have its nationals labeled as cinema sinners.

When the industry was young, Mexican villains were the fashion. But that was when relations between the United States and Mexico were not of the best. Now that the two republics are good friends, Mexican villains are, so to speak, withdrawn from circulation.

The tendency to cast a German or a Spaniard as a sly, unscrupulous schemer drew indignant protests from their home lands. And now Italian censors are refusing to pass films which represent Mussolini's countrymen as scoundrels.

It has been suggested that all nations contribute and that the task of "rationing" the total sum of villainy among the different countries be given the League of Nations, taking most villains from those nations that contribute least to the League. The fear is that the League would try to satisfy every one by eliminating villains altogether and placing the sources of human misfortune solely in the clumsy and inconsiderate movements of a globe which seems sometimes to forget that it is carrying mankind. Hollywood and all California could be depended upon to fight tooth and nail against anything that sounds too much like an earthquake.

Why not an Esperanto villain? An Esperanto or universal language is seriously advocated. After all every race and nation has its villains and villains are villains in the world over.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

Geraldine Foster, a very attractive young reception clerk in the Washington Square office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, vanished from her Morningside Heights apartment on the night before Christmas. Her room mate, Betty Canfield, reported her disappearance to the police three days after Christmas and appealed directly to Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt for aid. Betty held a phone conversation with Geraldine on Saturday, Christmas Eve, during which the latter said she wished she was dead. Betty telephoned Geraldine's mother and learned she had not arrived for the holiday. The missing girl's fiancé, Harry Armstrong, had not seen her since Friday. Dr. Maskell says he returned to his office Saturday afternoon to find Geraldine gone. Colt goes at once to the Foster apartment. He discovers that Geraldine had quarreled with Dr. Maskell. The missing girl's parents arrive. Colt finds an old-fashioned key in the pocket of Geraldine's coat. A blackmail note, presumably a Geraldine's hand-writing, is found in her desk.

CHAPTER VI

"YOU are sure it is Geraldine's handwriting?" asked Colt.

"Yes. I saw Geraldine when she wrote that note. It was on the morning of Christmas Eve. It was my turn to get breakfast and she was sitting at the desk, writing. All at once she tore up her unfinished letter and threw the pieces into the waste basket. Then she wrote another letter and later mailed it."

"But how did this fragment get way back there, behind the desk drawer?"

"For this Betty had no answer, and Thatcher Colt lifted the ornamental waste basket behind the secretary's desk."

"When did you empty this basket last?" he asked.

"This morning. I am sure those torn-up pieces were still in there—it hadn't been touched since last Saturday."

Thatcher Colt stalked to the telephone, fixed on the wall of the little entrance corridor, and called the switchboard operator in the Explains lobby.

"Please tell the janitor to come up to Apartment 4-D at once. Tell him the police want to see him."

Little Details.

While he was waiting, Thatcher Colt stood moodily in the center of the living room, the fragment of paper in his hand, while his eyes studied the inked letters with a growing interest. Fancifully with the eye-glasses of his roomer, I watched him eagerly. Something had occurred to him that we had not noticed. Slowly he turned and walked over to the desk, sat down, studied a memorandum Betty had left there, then lifted the desk fountain pen from its swivel holder and began to write on a blank sheet of note-paper lying near his hand.

What he was writing I could not see. It was only a short sentence, and, having put down his pen, he shoved the paper from him, regarded it frowningly, as if expecting it at any moment to become animated and perform a trick for him. Perhaps three minutes of utter silence passed while he watched that piece of paper. Then he lifted it and held it close to his eyes, slanting the paper to an oblique position, looking sharply askance at his own writing, and then comparing it with the torn fragment.

"How long have you been using this kind of ink, Betty?" he asked.

"We have a bottle of it—I think we've had it at least a month."

"Any other ink in the apartment?"

"None that I know of."

Thatcher Colt turned and looked at the girl solemnly.

"Think carefully and tell me," he said, "did Geraldine have a special ink bottle of her own?"

"No, sir. Is there anything wrong with that ink?"

Thatcher shrugged.

Different Ink.

"I don't know. But I am puzzled at one circumstance. The ink with which I have just written is not the same ink with which Geraldine Foster wrote that note, although both are purple. Geraldine's handwriting seems to me to be in Waterman's ink—certainly it is different from the fluid now in this fountain pen—the metallic glint of this dried writing of mine shows conclusively that I wrote with what is known as Sheaffer's 'Skrip'—they call it 'washable purple.'"

Without speaking, Betty turned to a closet and came back almost instantly with a bottle of ink in her hand.

"How amazing!" she exclaimed. "That is exactly the name on the label, 'Skrip.'"

Thatcher Colt smiled grimly.

"That isn't the amazing part," he said. "What is truly extraordinary is that these notes are written in different ink but with the same pen."

"What would that mean, Mr. Colt?"

Before the Commissioner could answer, the door bell rang loudly. I admitted the janitor, a sleepy Lithuanian in a ragged shirt. Standing in front of the Commissioner, his whole body sagged, as if he were sitting on an invisible stool.

"Is today's waste paper still down in the cellar?" asked the Commissioner.

"Tomorrow morning they will take it all away," declared the janitor, defensively.

"Then it's still here!" cried Thatcher Colt to me with a sigh of triumph. "Tony, I ordered Sergeant Burke to report to me at my ear in front of this house. He ought to be down there now. Show Burke this scrap of torn note, and tell him to go through all the waste paper in the cellar if it takes a week until he finds the rest of the pieces."

With a single electric bulb burning, I left Detective Sergeant Burke seated on a stool in front of two immense bales of waste paper gathered from twelve floors of apartments in the Explains. Knowing that this would be, at least, an all night job, I started back to the apartment on the fourth floor. But I never got there, for I found Thatcher Colt impatiently waiting for me in the sidewalk. I told him that Burke had started on his task. If we could say more, we were at the Commissioner's car, and Neil McMahon saluted and announced he had something of interest to impart. Neil's actual words were: "Chief, I got some dirt for you on this Foster case."

"I just got it from the janitor. He was telling me that on or about 8:10 a. m. on the morning of December 24, the said Foster dame and the said Canfield dame were having one hell of a row upstairs. The janitor happened to be in the hallway and he heard it. He don't know what the said girls were fighting about, but he reports that said fight was a lallapalooza."

"Thanks, Neil. Let's go."

Thatcher Colt got into the car and leaning far back he began to fill his pipe. As we started down the shelf-like street that runs along the brink of Morningside, the chief remarked:

"Now, why didn't that charming Betty tell us about that quarrel, Tony? And why didn't she tell us that she was once engaged to Geraldine's brother, Bruce?"

"How did you learn that?" I asked quickly.

"From the father, while you were down in the cellar. I got some crumbs from him. But he is not disposed to be communicative."

I lit a cigarette. We were passing the gaunt and immense edifice of the unfinished Cathedral of St. John the Divine. At our feet lay Manhattan, a lighted garden of brick and steel where millions of people lived. In all those millions, where was Geraldine Foster? I felt saddened inexpressibly; something which I could not single out had suddenly filled me with melancholy.

In silence we drove downtown until we reached the place of our appointment on the north side of Washington Square. The address at which we stopped was almost in the shadow of the triumphal arch which was designed by Stanford White, the victim of Harry Thaw. Oddly, the position of that impressive arch, in the midst of what was once the Potter Field of Manhattan, is on the very site of the old town gallows.

Doctor Humphrey Maskell had rented the first floor of one of those old-fashioned houses that line the north side of the park, and had made the lower floor into an office suite. As we approached the steps, we saw that a light was burning behind the drawn shades of the office windows. The doctor's brass plate was fixed into the bricks beside the front door. Thatcher Colt and I were about to mount the steps when a figure suddenly appeared in the vestibule. By the light shining through the transom, we saw him clearly, a little man, bent forward as if slightly hunchback. His hands were sunk deep into his trousers pockets, his eyes were sliding obliquely and slyly from side to side, as if he were watchful of a sudden attack. As he hesitated a moment, he muttered to himself:

"Get me to talk? Never. Get to me? Never. Think I can remember? Never, never, never. But Geraldine was kind to me."

That last phrase—"But Geraldine was kind to me"—seemed to echo in the dark air, as he rushed down the steps and fled past us without a glance. Across the street he hopped into the parked square, and vanished.

"Now, who do you suppose that was?" I asked.

"I don't know," replied my chief, "but I certainly mean to find out." And as we climbed the marble steps, he added: "He had a face like an ape and yet his eyes were not simian—they were human, and demented!"

LONDON

BY O. D. TOLISCHUS

(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Aug. 14—Are the 30 women who are peers in the House of Lords?

"Yes," says the Government. "No," counters the House of Lords.

And this, says Miss Marian Reeves, one of the most active fighters for the rights of peers, constitutes a "simply absurd position—a vicious circle which takes us nowhere."

This impasse has been reached after a battle by the women since 1919.

It is the view of the Government that the Sex Disqualification Act eliminated the ban on peers in the House of Lords.

But the membership of that body insists that there is no statute empowering the women to take seats.

"If," says Miss Reeves, "Mr. Short, Parliamentary secretary to the Home Office is right in saying, in effect, that there is no need for legislation, as peers, in their own right have already the legal authority to take a seat in the House of Lords, what becomes of the House of Lords' own resolution declaring that the Sex Disqualification Act does not do away with the disability?"

"When we asked the Prime Minister some time ago what the Government proposed to do, he said it was up to the House of Lords to rescind its own resolution."

The nobility years ago formed themselves into a Women Peers Committee, which operates through a sub-committee, including Miss Reeves, Lady Rhondda, and Mrs. Archdale, who have been active in taking up the question with Ramsay MacDonald.

Legislation leading to clear up the question has been buffeted about the two houses and their committees on various occasions.

A clause empowering the King to issue a writ of summons to a peeress in her own right was contained in a Government sex disqualification bill passed by the House of Commons. Turned down by the House of Lords, the clause was reinserted by the House of Commons, and again rejected by the Lords.

When Lady Rhondda petitioned for a writ of summons to the House of Lords, the Committee of Privileges supported her. But on second consideration, when the House of Commons sent the petition back to the Committee, it was denied.

Twice Viscount Astor introduced into the House of Lords a bill to seat women peers. It was defeated on both occasions—the first time by only two votes.

Treatment of infants with iron and iron salt doubles their resistance to disease, prevents and cures anaemia, and improves the rate of growth.

Studies conducted among two evenly matched groups of children at the Queen's Hospital for Children in London's East End developed those facts, states a report by Dr. Helen M. Mackay, issued by the Medical Research Council.

One group was given iron and ammonium citrate, while the other group did not receive this treatment. After three months of treatment, the recipients averaged more than one pound in weight over the average in the control group.

Among the children of the age most likely to be lacking in iron, those treated for three months had a weight advantage averaging two to two and one half pounds over the other group.

The report said, however, that "the most striking and most important effect of routine iron medication was the diminution of illness."

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

"I am Lord Fairfax," said the gentleman in the center, "and this is my friend Colonel Washington. May we have the honor to know your name?"

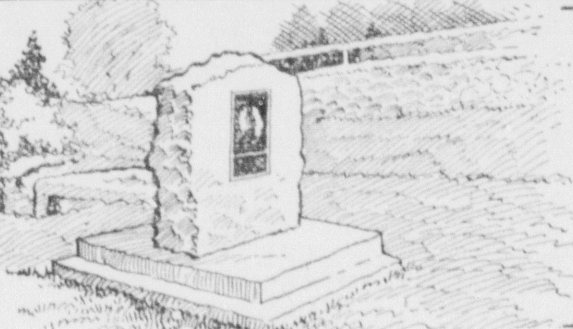

"I am Benjamin Franklin."

The Postmaster General of the Colonies had just dismounted from an uneasy horse remarking that he preferred "two certain legs to four uncertain ones." This simple introduction marked the meeting of two men about whom the world was to hear much in the future. The place: Fort Cumberland, Maryland on U. S. Route 1.

ONE of the many historical pick-ups along the road is this boulder, located on U. S. 40 near Braddock Heights, westbound from Frederick, Maryland. Here Lieut. Col. Washington rested his troops on the way to Fort Duquesne in 1775. Silent guns today mark the way of American history in the making. This is an old Braddock gun at Winchester, Virginia.

Styles in women's hair have changed as radically and precipitately as have modes in their millinery.

Sleek straight hair may have been all right when perky little berets were perched on one side of the head, but now that Mid-Victorian bowlers are the thing, if the lady hasn't a few curls to peep out and balance the feather on the other side—well she had just better let herself to the hair dresser's and either have her hair curled, or buy some "store curls" to dangle from her hat.

The false curls are in demand by women who wish to leave their hair straight for evening wear, but who put a few curls inside their hats to balance the feather.

Large department stores here report that nearly always a visit to the millinery department is followed by a call to the hair dresser's to have the hair arranged to suit the hat.

With the feathered hat on one side, it is said, the other side of the head looks too bare without curls, and the bowler creases too hard an effect.

Prisoners Make 6,000,000 Tags In Last Two Years

HARRISBURG, Aug. 14—More than 6,000,000 units of tags for automobiles, hunters, motorcycles and dogs, in the State were manufactured by the prison labor division of the State Department of Welfare, during the biennium ending May 31, 1931, according to figures issued today.

The effect of the business depression is reflected in the number of auto tags manufactured during the past 12 years by the prison labor division which shows in its report that in 1920, 635,000 units or sets of two tags each were made. The average increase per year until 1929 was about 125,000 units.

Between 1929 and 1932 however, with the 1932 production estimated, the increase amounts to an average of about 30,000 units per year, or approximately 75 per cent less than the increase for normal business years.

In 1929 the tag department of the prison industries located at the Western State Penitentiary manufactured

1,760,000 units while in 1932 the estimated number of units to be manufactured is only about 1,850,000 units.

It is said that the small size increases during years of depression are largely in the automobile field for the reason that men will dispense with the use of a car but are apt to spend time fishing, hunting and engaging in other pursuits of that type when unemployed.

Work on the 1932 contract for automobile tags has begun at the penitentiary and 17,832 units were produced during the month of May. This production will speed up in the next several months with the expectation that by the time the Highway Department forwards applications, most of the contracts will have been completed.

More than 170,000 hunters tags were manufactured in April and in May the production for that month amounted to 229,739 for hunters. These will be forwarded for distribution in the near future and will be ready for the coming season at an early date.

Newspaper Advertising Declared Best to Sell Building and Loan Shares

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14—Building and Loan societies were urged yesterday to sell their principles of thrift to the public by consistent advertising, especially in newspapers.

In advocating more extensive advertising, Marco Morrow, of the Capital Publications, Topeka, Kan., addressing the centennial convention of the U. S. Building and Loan League in joint session with the third international Building and Loan Congress said:

"It is up to the Building and Loan Associations to keep their principles before the public and not let big business do all the advertising."

Sydney J. Waltzer, vice-president of the British delegation, echoed the statements of Mr. Morrow, declaring that British Building and Loan Associations owe their progress to "advertising more than any other factor outside their own essential stability."

Continuing the plea for more advertising, Dr. Howard T. Hoyde, assistant professor of merchandising and lecturer in advertising at the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, told the delegates that "newspaper advertising is still the bulwark of the nation's advertising."

SPORTS

STAGG IN 40TH YEAR AS CHICAGO COACH

BY HENRY MOLDEN
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)
CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Alonso A. Stagg, "grand old man" of football, begins his fortieth season as gridiron coach at the University of Chicago with a squad that promises to be considerably improved over that of last year and which may bear comparison with some of the fabled Stagg teams of the past.

Coach Stagg's fortieth anniversary will be acknowledged on the Midway on October 17, when Yale, breaking all precedent, will send its eleven west to honor his years of "significant service to the best interests of college athletics."

As a student Stagg was one of Yale's greatest athletes. As a coach he has always stood for the finest elements of good sportsmanship. As a man he has kept in such excellent physical trim that last week he appeared with his youngest son, Paul, quarterback on the Maroon squad, in a tennis tournament. As an automobilist, he still guides an antiquated electric car about the Chicago campus.

Stagg, now white-haired and fatherly looking, he'll admit, recalls with a chuckle that players called him "The Old Man" as far back in 1897 but he admits he didn't particularly relish the title and failed to hear any intonations of respect that the players claim was behind it.

Nine lettermen will be on hand when the veteran mentor starts practice September 15, the date set by the Western conference. They are Paul Stagg, his son, quarterback; Joe Temple, Kenneth Mackenzie and Louis Kanne, backs; Capt. Sam Horwitz and Stanley Hamberg, guards; Keith Parsons, center; Walter Trude, tackle, and Bernard Wien, end.

Nothing startling in the way of materials, it is true, but opposing coaches, Robert C. Zuppke of Illinois, included, will tell you that two years ago Stagg developed a feared forward passing attack with a halfback who couldn't see well throwing the pigskin.

The squad is expected to number only about 28 as men on the Chicago campus are noted for their scholastic leanings rather than athletic. This is desperately small for a schedule that contains five games in the Big Ten, one of the strongest football combinations, and two intercollegiate campaigns.

But Stagg makes no complaints. He believes that if there is no great run of injuries the group will be able to make a good record. Shortage of reserve material evidently will be the critical factor.

Parsons, a center, was the only sophomore to win his major letter last season; the other letter winners are playing their third year of varsity competition together.

Stagg's backfield aspect is considered bright because of the sophomores. Paul Stagg will direct the others, who may possibly be three first-year men. One of these is Pat Page Jr., son of the famous Maroon athlete and well known coach, who has all the relentless drive of his father. Pete Zimmer is the ball carrier of the trio and Vinson Schlitz is an elusive, quick shifting man for interference.

The schedule is as follows: * Sept. 26—Hillsdale and Cornell college, doubleheader; Oct. 10—At Michigan; Oct. 17—Yale; Oct. 24—Indiana; Oct. 31—Purdue; Nov. 7—Arkansas; Nov. 14—At Illinois; Nov. 21—Wisconsin.

WILL NOT MAKE AUTO CHECK IN 1931

New Code Changes Plan For Official Inspection
Stations

3 TYPES OF STATIONS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 14.—There will be no full motor vehicle inspection this year, Benjamin G. Eynon, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, today announced.

The amended vehicle code as approved by Governor Gifford Pinchot abolishes official headlight adjusting stations and official brake stations, and also the official inspection stations of the annual inspection campaigns. These distinct types of stations will be replaced by stations designated "Official Inspection Stations" which will perform the functions of those they replace. This section of the code does not become effective until January 1, 1932.

Persons desiring to qualify their place of business as official motor vehicle inspection stations will be required by the Department of Revenue to pass rigid tests before a certificate of appointment will be issued.

The department is not making appointments now nor is it considering applications for appointments, Commissioner Eynon said. Proper notification will be given as to the time the department will receive applications.

The new stations will have the same authority to issue headlight and brake certificates as did the old ones. In addition they will also serve as inspection stations during the periodical compulsory inspection campaigns. They will make corrections, adjustments and repairs and inspect all safety equipment on motor vehicles, trailers and semi-trailers.

While appointments are to be permanent, Commissioner Eynon made it clear that this permanency remains only as long as the station meets the requirements set down by the Department of Revenue. Persons desiring to operate an official inspection station will be required to apply to the Department of Revenue for a certificate of appointment on forms furnished by the department. Separate applications will be required for each place of business to be operated by the applicant.

Appointments will only be made to those applicants whose space, facilities, equipment, trained personnel and general attitude toward the public meet with the approval of the department. Department representatives will visit every applicant and personally inspect his place of business. These representatives will be authorized to approve or reject applications.

It is proposed to district the State in such a manner that department representatives will have a specified number of stations under their constant supervision. "We propose to keep a constant check on all stations," Commissioner Eynon said. "The interests of the motoring public, as well as that of the stations, will be safeguarded in every possible way."

Where stations are improperly conducted, the department has the authority to suspend the certificate of appointment and to require its surrender together with all department forms. Owners are forbidden to assign or attempt to assign their certificate of appointment. The loan or sale of certificates of approval is against the law.

Necessary space and equipment for the proper inspection of lighting equipment is an absolute requirement for appointment. This also applies to brakes, but brake-testing machinery is not necessary provided road tests are properly made. Sufficient tools and general repair shop equipment will be required. Every station must have orderly and easily accessible space.

Applications will not be considered on the basis that space, equipment or mechanics will be provided at a later date, Commissioner Eynon said. They must be in evidence when the department representative makes his inspection. No certificate will be issued on promises.

"The reputation of the automotive industry in Pennsylvania for real maintenance service rests upon the manner in which the appointed official inspection stations co-operate with the department in subsequent inspection campaigns," Commissioner Eynon said. "Those applicants who cannot comply with the requirements of the department will be wasting their own and the department's time by applying for appointment."

Imprisoned by Mistake? His Face His Misfortune

Owing to His Facial Resemblance to the Notorious "Two-Gun" Crowley, Patrick O'Brien Is Serving 20-Year Sentence for Crime He Claims Former Committed.

MRS. HELEN O'BRIEN and DAUGHTER EILEEN.
Picked out of the spectators in a court where he had gone to see the trial of a former school chum and charged with holding up a drug store, Patrick O'Brien, of New York, was sentenced to twenty years in prison, despite the protests of his mother that he was ill in bed with pleurisy when the crime was committed. Now Gerald Weed, former crime-partner of the notorious "Two-Gun" Crowley, who is awaiting execution for the murder of a policeman, has confessed that he and Crowley committed the crime for which O'Brien was sentenced. O'Brien bears a striking resemblance to the killer and, with his mother, is pleading for a reopening of his case on the grounds that he is the innocent victim of mistaken identity.
